THE PROCESS AT WORK: BERNADETTE BOUR'S PAINTING

THE CANVAS REVEALS WHAT IT'S MADE OF.

BERNADETTE BOUR

Bernadette Bour's large free-hanging canvases are striking not only for their monumentality, but also for their richly worked textures – composed of paint, ink, collaged paper and thread – which captivate our gaze. [...]

The entire surface of the canvas appears to be in movement. Threads interweave and overlap; sewn stitches stop and then reappear further away, expanding and contracting throughout the pictorial space that stretches nearly seven feet high. The lines of sewn threads might lead us to think of a kind of writing, a cascade of indecipherable words or phrases in the process of taking on form and meaning. They seem to be forging a path across the celestial space of the canvas.../...
